Illustrated Lecture

William Booth-Clibborn will give a stereoptican lecture at the Methodist church union services Sunday evening. The lecture is on the life of Christ, illustrated by 240 slides collected by Herbert Booth who lectured at the Congregational church last Sunday evening.

William Booth-Clibborn is the third son of Mrs. Catherine Booth-Clibborn, who is the eldest daughter of the late General Booth, the founder of the Salvation Army. There is a striking resemblance between this young man and his grandfather, as he was at the same age.

He was born in Switzerland, while his father and mother were pioneering the work of the Salvaton Army in that country, during which they were several times imprisoned during the persecutions there. He was educated in French, German and English schools, and speaks four languages fluently.

Off For the Races

Salinas, Cal., July 9—Entries for the twenty-fifth annual meeting of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association, which will be held here July 25-29, have been closed, and it is announced that at least 125 well-known horses will participate in the trotting and pacing events for prizes aggregating $15,050. The horses entered are among the finest now being being campaigned on the Pacific Coast and there is every reason to anticipate exceptional performances.

Asa Pointer, entered in the 2:20 pacing class, has worked a mile in 2:07 at Pleasanton and is considered the most promising green pacer in the state. White Sox, another of the entries, was a three-year-old trotter last year, and has been converted into a pacer. She has a number of stakes to her credit. In the 2:15 there is Panama, a four-year-old that won second money in the Breeders' futurity last year. The owner is S. H. Cowell of Santa Cruz. Robert Bingen, owned by the Woodland Stock Farm, will start in the 2:10 pace and is expected to go faster than the time of his class. There is an extra good field in the 2:20 trot and every heat should be better than 2:10.

To Celebrate Success

In celebration of the success of the Sempervirens Club in its long hard fight to secure a roadway over the Saratoga summit into the Big Basin Park, a "Breaking of the Ground" picnic has been set for Saturday, July 18, in which the citizens of the state are invited to participate.

The place of the celebration is the old Hubbard & Carmichael lumber yard site, on the line of the road survey and about two miles from the Saratoga summit. From Saratoga take the Saratoga grade via Congress Springs to the summit where a representative of the Club will give further directions to the site. About one and a half hours will be required to drive by automobile from San Jose to the grounds. As the road from the summit is narrow, all automobiles on the going trip must reach the grounds by one o'clock, after which time no vehicles will be permitted to go in. Returning no automobile may leave the grounds before two o'clock.

This is to be a basket picnic, so every one is requested to bring a well filled hamper. Coffee, Bread, Sugar, and Milk will be served by the Club. Bring your own coffee pot and cups if possible. Lunch will be served at 12:30 and the exercises will commence promptly at 1:30.

DISPOSED OF FAMILY "PET"

Mr. Bildo Bore Much With Fortitude, but There Came a Time When Patience Failed.

"Did you ever have a dog in the family?" asked Bildo. "We did recently. How that dog got into the family, I don't know. Each member of the houhehold went around saying 'I am sorry they got that dog' by the time we had had him a week.

"There was never any way of telling who was responsible for his presence with us. No one claimed the credit of it.

"We disposed of him because he took a piece out of a man's trousers. It was a peddler's trousers. It is a bad thing to let a dog bite a peddler.

"The peddler stormed up to my door a day or so after the event and informed me that he had been in the hospital a week, and that I must pay his hospital expenses; also his doctor's bill; also for the time he had lost from his vocation; also for the pants which my dog had ruined.

"When I asked to see his receipts from the hospital and doctor he offered to compromise on my paying $5 for the damage done his trousers. I offered to pay the five, but insisted on immediate delivery of the garment.

"He was unable to deliver the goods, so it cost me nothing. Still, it was a narrow escape, and I decided that I had better either acquire a lawyer or get rid of the dog.

"While I was pondering a man went by all dressed up in a beetle-tailed coat, with while gloves on like a pall-bearer ready to dance the tango, and the dog fell for him. The apples in the Garden of Eden didn't look near as good to Adam as that man did to my dog, and he got a chunk out of the black legs of that man.

"The tango dancer had a fiery disposition, and what he proposed was not to sue, but to lick the owner of the dog immediately. This made me very uncomfortable, indeed. I hid in the cellar until the storm blew over.

"We got a muzzle for the dog after that, and then he scratched up the neighbor's geraniums. We consoled ourselves that he was a good watch dog, anyway, but one night a burglar got into the house and stepped on him, and that scared the creature so badly that we had to let him sleep in the bed with us after that.

"We tried keeping him in the shed, but he dug out in the night and after announcing his presence by licking us on the face, he crawled in with us, fleas and muddy feet, and all.

"So we had to get rid of him."

CATCH AND KILL MOSQUITOES

Pestiferous Little Insects Are Lured by Light Into Mesh of Electrically Charged Wires.

There is an old joke to the effect that one way to get rid of flies is to catch the flies and hold them down upon a brick while you hit them in the head with a hammer. It now develops that this is not so much of a joke as it seems, for two inventors of Illinois have promulgated the proposition that the way to get rid of mosquitoes is catch the mosquitoes and kill them. They do not propose to follow the hammer and brick method, however, but their scheme contemplates luring the mosquito, by means of a light inclosed in a box, into the meshes of electrically charged wire threads. The box is open on one end and the lamp is placed inside. The light attracts the Jersey gallinipper, and as he flies toward it be comes in contact with an ingeniously arranged network of tiny wires. The wires are so tiny that the insect must come in contact with at least two of them and in so doing the deadly current is sent through the body of the insect. To further insure the demise of the latter a saucer of coal oil is provided to receive his body as it falls after being shocked. It does not require any great amount of current to kill a mosquito, and this is provided by a few batteries.

For Electrocuting Mosquitoes.

The Question.

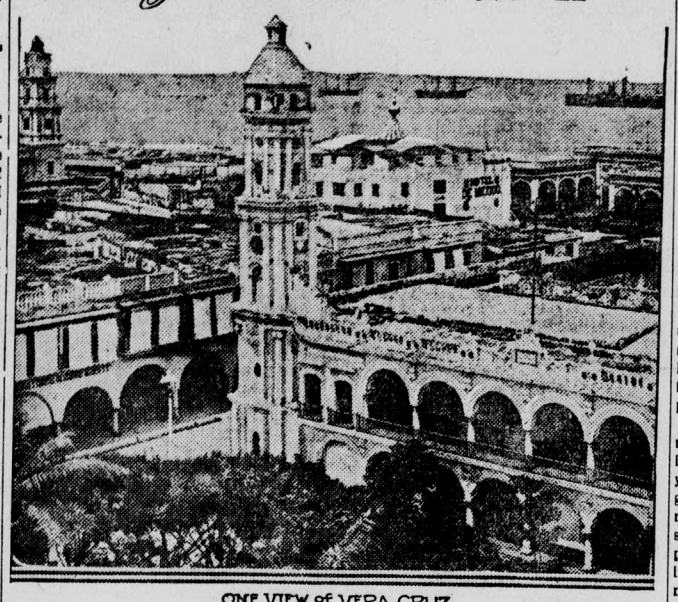
Postmaster General Burleson said at a banquet in Washington:

"One of our post office stories concerns a post office census taken a number of years ago:

"A question in this census was: 'What are your marital relations?'

"The answers to this question were startling. One post master answered: 'Fair to middling.' Another answered: 'Fine.' A third, poor fellow, made the tragic answer: 'The worst.'"

Vera Cruz City of the Future



ONE VIEW of VERA CRUZ

FROM the City of Mexico one slides down to Vera Cruz in five hours and is in a tropical, sea level, cosmopolitan city. It is the same change as traveling from Denver to Galveston, if the trip could be made as quickly.

Or, if one comes by boat, the wide mouth of an open bay opens invitingly to the commerce of the world. The outline of the city takes form in a two-mile sweep of the water front. There are low houses along the bay with palms that wave above their eaves. There are square, four-story, adobe hotels that back them up. The solemn towers of ancient churches, cross-capped, rise here and there. The jungle slopes back up the town, and beyond these is Orizaba, magnificent among volcanoes, smoking majestically from among her tropical snows, writes a correspondent of the Philadelphia Record.

Coming in by rail before I dreamed that our flag would soon be flying over the city, I saw but a few blocks of square-built, balconied business houses with residences above, before reaching my hotel. This establishment, by name Hotel Diligencia, signifies diligence. This, despite the fact that it was the hour of the midday siesta, and all the town was asleep. Yet perhaps it portrayed diligence in comparison to other institutions, for I found a motley assortment of Europeans participating of "refrescas" in its sidewalk restaurants.

This Hotel Diligencia is the hub of the town from the standpoint of its external affairs. It stands on the Plaza de la Constitucion, which gives an immediate secondary insight into the matter of extravagant nomenclature. One has but to ask the name of the main street which runs past the other front of the hotel for more evidence of the veneer of glory and freedom that appears on a city map. This main street is Avenue de la Independencia.

Link to Outside World.

This slumbrous hotel of Diligence on Constitution square, Independence avenue, furnishes a setting for the battle of all languages of Europe. Vera Cruz is Mexico's link to the outside world, and the business interests that do that business have their representatives in that city. There are the German representatives of great mercantile establishments, the English representatives of large concession holders, the Italian officers for steamship companies, the French agencies for automobiles, the man from Chicago who sells refrigerated meats in the tropics, for the country is not self-supporting, despite its riches.

About the Hotel Diligencia runs a wide porch, supported at the outer edge of the sidewalk by great square pillars. About each of these is built a table. Tropical jungle trees add their shade to that of the porch. So is produced a model setting for that sidewalk restaurant effect much utilized in Europe but seen nowhere else in all North America but in Vera Cruz. About these tables sit citizens of all nations. There also gather the natives. About these same tables may be seen those Mexican ladies of today who bear the blood of the Spanish conquerors infused with the best of the upper caste Aztecs, and there are produced nowhere on earth women of more lustrous beauty.

From this town center branch off innumerable narrow streets that multiply themselves until they have developed a city two miles long, as the coast runs, and half as deep. Altogether it furnishes habitation for some thirty thousand people, and is the largest city on all the coasts of Mexico. It is the logical shipping point for the trade of a nation, and would multiply itself by ten if the Yankees had Mexico for as many years. It has paved streets, sewers, sanitation, harbor improvements. It is magnificently situated—a city of the future.

It is two blocks from the plaza to the water front, and it was up the street that leads that way that the first American rifle shots were fired when Vera Cruz was seized the other day. It was from the roof of the Parochial church, gray and forbidding, across the plaza, that the shot was fired that killed the first American marine.

The Plaza de la Constitucion abounds in grape-laden arbors. There is music in the square on three nights of the week, and it is converted into a dress parade. It wakes in cool of early morning, for the Vera Cruzans rise early and transact their business before the heat of the day arrives. At 11 o'clock the shops along Avenue de la Independencia put up their shutters. The whole public retreats into its sleeping quarters behind thick, adobe walls where the cool of the morning still lingers because of the early closing of every aperture, and takes its siesta.

The Sacred Scavenger.

But while Vera Cruz sleeps from eleven to one, Nature's scavengers are at work. It is a weird scene that meets the American who passes down the deserted streets of this port of a rich nation at the siesta hour. With shutters up and all the human life of the city suspended, one walks the deserted streets with a feeling of weird desolation. It appears to the unaccustomed visitor as a city of the dead.

And as he passes through the still, sunlit streets bereft of human companionship there is ever with him that weird presence of the scavenger buzzard. This, the sacred bird of mystery of the Aztecs, is a sort of guardian spirit of this city of the tropics. The new sewage system of Vera Cruz does much to dispose of its refuse, but there is still need of the turkey buzzard for doing away with matter left on the surface. So they flock through the streets. They hop about the gutters and are so tame as to be almost stepped on. They ride majestically and solemnly on the tail of any passing milk cart. They sit in the trees of Plaza de la Constitucion. But above all, they flock by the thousands about the roof of the old Parochial church across that plaza from the hotel.

And this spot is rich in historical events with which every man is acquainted, but the exact setting for which he has forgotten. Here it was that Cortez burned his ships in 1519. He first landed at this little island with his band of soldiers of fortune gathered from among the adventurous spirits who were then wont to rendezvous about Porto Rico. The ships were burned that retreat might be made impossible and the march inland was begun, 600 men against the millions, with no possibility of retreat.

LOGIC OF THE INNOCENTS

Why the Poorest People Have the Most Babies Explained in a Simple Manner.

A Lakewood mother, reading quietly in a secluded corner of the room, heard her two children, aged five and seven, wishing they could have a new baby sister.

"Mamma could not afford it," declared the elder.

"Why not," demanded the younger. "Where do babies come from?"

"Why, when folks die and go to heaven, God makes 'em over into babies and sends 'em to folks."

"Then why couldn't mamma afford one? Mrs. Skovtsky, the woman that does the washing, she's the poorest woman I ever saw, and she has eight!"

"Well, don't you see? Poor people always have to have made-over things."

And this true story comes from the mother who overheard this fine logic. —Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Appearances.

"Bliggins is doing his best to appear youthful."

"Dyes his mustache and wears a toupee?"

"No. Puts on bathing clothes and tries to look like a Boy Scout."

Exaggerated Optimism.

"What is your idea of an optimist?"

"An optimist," replied Mr. Growcher, "is a man who thinks he has the makings of an automobile because he has managed to get hold of a gallon of gasoline and a spark plug."

FLOCK TO "MOVIES"

Natives of the Far East Attracted by Shows.

In Singapore the Natives Have Been Quick to Seize on the New Western Pastime—High Admission Prices.

The wide popularity of moving pictures in Singapore is only another instance of the rapid absorption of Western ideas by Eastern people, popularly considered as indifferent to the march of civilization, according to United States Vice-Consul General Casper L. Dreier, writing from the Straits Settlements.

Going to see the "movies" has already become a favorite form of relaxation with the Singaporeans, Mr. Dreier says, and he predicts a great future for the cinematograph in all parts of the East.

"Singapore," he says, "was by no means behind the rest of the world in its adoption of the bioscope. Many years have elapsed since the cinematograph was first introduced to local residents in a small show on High street, and the surprise of the native population when they witnessed moving and performing acts which seemed more in place in actual life can much more easily be imagined than described. There are now five picture houses in this city, and in a short time more will be added to the number. Some of the buildings used for motion picture purposes are ordinary frame structures with thatched roofs.

"An interesting feature of local cinematograph theaters is the way they cater to the poorer native classes by arranging benches made of planks at the rear of the stage or screen. Admission to this part of the house is ten cents local currency, or about 5.1 cents United States gold, and it is not unusual to have nearly a thousand people witnessing the pictures from the other side. They are compelled, of course, to view the picture backward, but it seems to make little difference, as they do not read the English description and receive their sole amusement from the attractiveness of the picture itself. This feature is depended on by the theaters for a goodly portion of their revenue. Admission to the front part of the building seems exorbitant compared with similar shows in the United States, the general price being $2 local currency, or $1.14 American."

HELEN DUNBAR

Miss Helen Dunbar is very popular with her host of admirers for her splendid portrayals of a wide range of characters in the Indian Head films. Miss Dunbar is a woman of charming personality, a fine photographic subject and her long stage experience before joining the photoplay forces has perfected her for any role she is called upon to assume.

"Movies" for Baseball Men.

John J. McGraw, manager of the Giants, has made arrangements to install a projection machine in the Giants' clubhouse, where the ball players will be given daily instruction and tips regarding possible improvements in their work. Harry E. Aiken conceived the idea of applying the lessons of the movies to big league baseball. He believes that just as the employes of the Pittsburgh steel plants are taught industrial processes and labor saving movements in their work, so can a baseball player be coached by scenes of the motion picture camera in improving his work.

Marie Dressler in Photo-Plays.

Marie Dressler is to be seen in a series of special movie comedies, three and four reels in length. Work of production has been going on for some time under the direction of Mack Sennett, and the comedies featuring Miss Dressler will start to appear before the public by the first of July.

Aviation Drama Coming.

In a new film, "The Navy Aviator," Sidney Ayres, as an aviator, drops a bomb by which Jack Richardson, playing the role of a traitor and brigand, is killed.

FRANK DAYTON

Frank Dayton has been with a prominent motion picture producing company for four years. Previous to his joining the company, he was in "In Old Kentucky," for eight years, not consecutively, but at different times. His theatrical engagements have been long ones. Before joining the "In Old Kentucky" company Mr. Dayton played in the following companies under the management of Charles Frohman: "Shenandoah," as Col. Kercheval West; "Lost Paradise," as Ralph Standish; "The Girl I Left Behind Me," as Private Jones, and Empire, New York theater productions. Mr. Dayton plays heavy dramatic leads and is especially adapted for modern character types.

DEPICTING LIFE OF VILLA

Moving Picture Reels Make Hero of the War Leader of Mexican Constitutionalists.

Here is the general synopsis of the war film entitled "The Life of General Villa:" "Years ago Pancho Villa was a young rancher living alone with his pretty young sister and doing well. One day a young lieutenant of the Mexican federal army came to that locality with another young officer. The lieutenant became smitten with Villa's sister, and with the aid of his companion abducted her and ruined her. The sister, after telling her brother, died and Villa journeyed to the garrison town and killed the lieutenant, but the companion escaped. Villa then sold his ranch and with a small body of men escaped to the mountains, vowing warfare on all mankind in revenge for the death and ruin of his sister. He became a bandit, and by meeting and defeating other bandits became the chief of a great band, the terror of the northern part of Mexico. He was particularly sore at the federal government, and when the revolution broke out he sided with the revolutionists and their leader. Sallying forth from the mountains, he blew up train loads of federals and met and defeated every federal army that was sent against him, captured town after town and city after city. At the last great and decisive battle he meets face to face the federal officer who had assisted in the abduction of his sister and helped to start him on his road to banditry and outlawry. He kills the federal officer with his own hands on the battlefield. The federals are defeated and Villa is finally proclaimed president of the republic of Mexico—he who was once an outlaw with a price upon his head."

War Theme of Many Reels.

War is furnishing the theme for many motion picture reels now being prepared. A company is at work on a series of scenes that show Uncle Sam's soldier boys in every arm of the service—infantry, cavalry, artillery and the signal corps; in setting up exercises, in making and breaking camp, in drills and skirmishes, and in cavalry tactics in which the troopers quite outdo the feats of ordinary circus riders. A reel will be devoted to the entrainment of all forces, including artillery, and their movements in the field. In this latter detail will be shown large bodies of men, full battalions of cavalry, and batteries of artillery up to the war standard, scouting, reconnoitering, making their way over rough country, fording rivers; in fact, all of the experiences that an army in the field encounters. The pictures were taken under the auspices of the United States war department.

New Comedy "Movie."

Blanche Ring and the entire cast of "When Claudia Smiles," now playing in New York, were filmed recently in the "Why Is the Ocean So Near the Shore?" number. Later, Norma Phillips, "Our Mutual Girl," in a black and white costume, danced the "Boys! Boys! Boys" number with the male chorus.

Favorite Actor Convalescent.

Little Bobby Connelly, who has been sick with pneumonia for three weeks, is reported to be convalescent. He will soon be seen in some new life portrayals as Sonny Jim, which character he has already made famous under the direction of Tefft Johnson.

William Farnum Engaged.

William Farnum will be presented in "The Redemption of David Corson," by Charles Frederic Goss.

ON THE FUNNY SIDE

WHAT TROUBLED JIM MURPHY

Not Tobacco Heart, as Physician Had Diagnosed, But the Effects of Cabbage Plant.

They were talking about the doctor and his diagnosis in the lobby of a Washington hotel the other evening when Congressman Thomas G. Patten of New York told of an incident that happened in Gotham.

Some time ago, he said, an esteemed citizen who wasn't enjoying his usual appetite and cheerfulness, consulted a physician, and was told he had tobacco heart. The information he imparted to his sympathetic friends. A few days later one of his friends met the doctor on the street.

"Say, doc," remarked the friend, "did you tell Jim Murphy that he had tobacco heart?"

"Jim Murphy," repeated the doctor, thoughtfully. "Yes, I believe I did. Why?"

"Nothing," was the smiling reply of the friend. "Only if you had ever smoked one of his cigars you would have made the diagnosis cabbage heart."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Distressing Symptom.

"Doctor," said Dennis, the old squire's valet, "don't you think the masther is getting mighty thin?"

"No harm in that, Dennis," said the doctor; "he was too fat. He'll be healthier when he's thinner."

"Loikely he will," said Dennis, disappointedly; "but Oi won't be able to wear his ould clothes then."—Grit.

Timely Warning.

"What's this game you're tryin' to interduce into Crimson Gulch?" asked Bronco Bob.

"It's called pinochle," replied the traveling salesman.

"Well, put it away. If some of the boys was to see all them aces comin' out in the same deal, they'd be almost sure to get rattled an' start shootin'."

Efficiency Test.

Horsepower of Water.

Still the water gives no power, no energy. Falling water has only as much power as is represented by its weight. A gallon of falling water will develop as much power as a falling block of iron weighing 62.5 pounds. Of course, the greater the fall the greater the power developed. Water falling one foot will develop a pressure of .43 pounds per square inch of pipe. The same amount of water falling 100 feet will develop a pressure of 43.31 pounds per square inch of pipe. Falling 1,000 feet, it would produce a pressure of 433.09 pounds per square inch of pipe.

To compute the power of falling water it is necessary to multiply the volume of flowing water in cubic feet per minute by its weight, 62.5 pounds, and this product by the vertical height of the fall in feet, and divide by 33,000, the number of foot-pounds representing one horsepower for one minute.

BRUSSELS Enjoys Life to Fullest

IN a previous letter I mentioned the blend found here of the Teutonic and Gallic types. In no other respect is it so plainly manifested as in the matter of the popular amusements. Of theaters there are many, doing all sorts of things dramatic. Of "cinemas," or motion picture shows, there are scores, all crowded. There is a grand opera of first class, producing the best of classic works, at remarkably low prices. Think of getting six seats in the "orchestra" at an American high-grade operatic performance, equal, according to many critics, to the Metropolitan in New York, for $7.20—and practically the best in the house. Yet that is possible here, writes G. A. Lyons, Jr., for the Washington Star.

With the exception of the opera house, which stands alone on a conveniently shaped and located square, with a wide plaza in front of it, the theaters are almost without exception insignificant in external appearance. Several of them are located with their entrances in the "galleries" or arcades, in which the center of the business section of Brussels abounds.

The "cinemas" are everywhere, with surprising expanses of seating space when one has passed the doors. I attended one last evening with an entrance about fifteen feet in width. Within it proved to be a vast hall, capable of seating fully 3,000 people, with two galleries. An orchestra of 20 pieces rendered the finest of music in artistic manner, while a stupendously elaborate "movie" story of French medieval melodramatics was put on the screen.

Must Buy Something.

These people were seated most ingeniously in a manner to permit expert waiters to move about and take orders—and cash. When the stranger pays his entrance fee of, say, 30 centimes (six cents), or in some cases 50 centimes (ten cents), he thinks he has gained the freedom of the house. Not so. As soon as he is seated a gentlemanly waiter quietly asks him what he wishes. He probably "wishes" nothing and so declares, whereupon the gentlemanly waiter, assures him, with an air of instructing a young child in the ways of righteousness, that it is "obligation," pronounced insinuatingly, and thereupon it becomes the stranger to order something, a cup of coffee—which will be surprisingly good and reasonable—or something stronger. And so he pays twice, his whole entrance fee being perhaps 15 cents or possibly 20.

But he gets good value for the money. He sees a first-class "movie" and he hears an orchestra concert of high order. Incidentally he can observe around him the Belgian public enjoying itself, with here the gravity of the Holland type and there the effervescence of the French type. Many of the people are drinking beer, others are drinking aperitifs, many coffee and some are enjoying lemonade. There is no disorder, and even the joyous Gallic laughter that breaks out between the "reels" when the lights are turned on is decorous.

Music appeals strongly to the Belgian soul, and here the two types meet on common ground. The other evening we attended a "Concert Artistique" in an establishment which is known by that name alone. The room was comparatively small, holding at capacity perhaps 800 or a 1,000 people. No admission was charged, the place being supported by the sales of drinkables of all kinds at a reasonable scale of prices. Here, too, the coffee was good.

The musical program was strictly classic, rendered by an orchestra of about twelve violins and cellos, with two reeds, a piano and a leader-organist. A few vocal numbers were interspersed with the instrumental selections, not of a particularly high order of merit, however. Not many people were present, that being Friday night, when the majority of Brussels folks are saving their cash for their big Saturday and Sunday night diversions. On Sunday night, I was told, this place is always packed to the doors, with people waiting for chances to get places at the long, narrow tables running lengthwise of the hall.

In this place it is customary, if entering early, at the beginning of the program, to give at least two orders during the evening. If one enters at 9:30 o'clock or thereabouts the waiter is content with one order.

Play Games in Cafes.

In practically all the cafes—with the exception so far as I have observed of that which I have just mentioned—it is customary for the guests to play cards, dominoes or chess. The other evening in the Metropole, which is one of the largest, I counted not less than 15 chess games in progress from where I sat in a corner. The room was packed. Waiters were moving about swiftly, filling orders for food and drink, and there were probably in all a couple of hundred games of all kinds in progress—without stakes—and the most delicate passages of the finest of orchestral music were audible at the farthest part of the great hall. At the close of a selection the eaters and drinkers applaud. Even the chess players rouse themselves from their intense abstraction to express their subconscious appreciation of "Rigollete" or "Faust" or "Mignon" or "Madam Butterfly."

In passing it is just to say that the Brussels orchestras play "ragtime," but it is always done in an artistic manner. They do not descend to the grotesque devices of their transatlantic musical brethren to distort cadences and express the gasping syncopations of the later school of music. And it is also just to say that there is more applause in the cafes for the classic music than for the novelties.

The other evening I observed to a member of our party that in a city of so much music, with big orchestras in so many places, scores of them including hundreds of performers, the business of musician must be a good one.

"It would be," he replied, "but for the fact that there are too many musicians."

So great is the demand for music here that young musicians come to Brussels from long distances—even from Kansas and Wisconsin. There is here located one of the finest conservatories in Europe, and the product of finished instrumentalists and vocalists is large. The average pay for a good performer in a large cafe orchestra, I am told, is about $2 a day, with more for soloists.

Character.

My character today is, for the most part, simply the resultant of all the thoughts I have ever had, of all the feelings I have ever cherished and all the deeds I have ever performed. It is the entirety of my previous years packed and crystalized into the present moment, so that character is the quintessence of biography, so that anybody who knows my character—and there is no keeping character under cover—knows what for forty or more years I have been doing and thinking. Character is for the most part simply habit become fixed.—Charles H. Parkhurst.

MAY SAVE HIS PEARS

NEWARK MAN'S SCHEME REALLY A BRILLIANT ONE.

At Least He Is Very Sure Tony Will Leave Fruit Alone, After He Explained Composition of Bone Fertilizer.

A well-known gentleman of Forest Hill has a back-lot orchard of which he is no fonder than some of the newcomers to these shores. A ten-foot hedge and a barb-wire fence fail to defend his premises against the invaders. Even letters in the paper cannot save his peaches, pears, and apples from the hands of the spoiler.

In the season when the fruit is ripening, he has discovered that his trees will be watched day and night by self-appointed guards, who warn other fruit fanciers away. One day he overheard a hot quarrel just outside his grounds, and, understanding a little of the strange tongue in which the argument was carried on, he made out that Pedro was scolding Tomasso in words to this effect:

"Go on away from here, Tom, this is my pear tree. I saw it first, and I've been watching it four weeks."

Pedro's sons will come now and then to relieve him in his vigil. The pear tree is a family treasure, which they conserve with true Pinchotian zeal until the fruit is almost ripe. Then, in the quiet hours of a night when Forest Hill sleeps the sleep of happy innocence or sits up working on its literary papers, Pedro and his tribe will bore through the hedge and garner the prize.

Despairing of hedge and fence and publicity, the Forest Hill gentleman has gone into psychology. One day last month he hired a man to spade up his garden, and with malice prepense he selected a neighbor of Pedro's from across the canal to do the work.

Under the fruit trees while the spading was going on he scattered bone fertilizer with great care.

"This is very precious stuff, Tony," he said, as he sprinkled the odorous powder over the broken soil. "It is worth almost its weight in gold. No other fertilizer in the world will make fruit grow the way this will. Can you guess what it is made of Tony?"

Tony had no idea.

"It is made," said the veracious gentleman, "from human bones. Have you ever heard of the catacombs, Tony?"

Tony had.

"Well, the American company that manufactures this stuff has discovered some catacombs in Italy that nobody else knows about. The catacombs are filled with human skeletons, millions of them, and the American company sends its steamers over there and brings back shiploads of skulls and tibias and femurs and ribs, and the factory turns the bones into this stuff that I am putting into the ground. Some of your ancestors, Tony, may be mixed up in this bag."

Tony shuddered.

"It seems too bad to use human bones in this way, but wait till you see the fruit these trees will bear next fall—apples as big as your head, Tony, and pears as juicy as watermelons."

Tony's mouth refused to water at the thought.

"The curious thing about it is that the trees that absorb this stuff into their sap are always haunted. If you come around here any dark night next summer, Tony, you will see all sorts of queer things flying and dancing and swinging up yonder in the branches—goblins. Tony, and maybe the ghost of your great-great-grandfather, skipping around up there in the starlight and making faces at you. It gives you a kind of shivery feeling, doesn't it, Tony?"

In such manner spoke the Forest Hiller, and from the look on his laborer's face he felt that his talk had not been in vain—had borne fruit, as it were.

After many years of pomicultural effort, he believes that he will be able at last to harvest a fine, full crop.—Newark News.

Evaporation and Stream Flow.

An investigation of evaporation and stream flow is being carried out by Prof. John F. Hayford of Northwestern university with the aid of a grant from the Carnegie institution. Instead of using apparatus on a small scale to measure evaporation, Professor Hayford proposes to consider each of the great lakes in turn as an evaporation pan, evaluate the income, outgo (other than evaporation) and change of content of the lake, and from these data to determine the daily evaporation in its relation to meteorological conditions. Ultimately the knowledge thus acquired will be applied to a study of the laws of stream flow in the United States.—Scientific American.

"Ting-a-Ling," Says Base.

With the kindest of motives and in behalf of the poor [illegible]ire of a baseball game, Stephen Willis has invented a base which will give an alarm or signal when the runner reaches or touches it, thus ending the dispute which now comes when it takes place between the runner, the umpire and other members of the team as to whether or not the runner reached first base before the baseman caught the ball. This is accomplished by having the baseplate or bag hinged and raised at one edge by a spring. When the runner touches the base it is depressed, making an electrical contact which sounds the alarm or raises the signal.

Thirteenth-Century Fire Prevention.

One wonders what fate would have overtaken the captured starter of fires in thirteenth-century London. For after the blaze of 1212, which lasted ten days, swallowed up part of London bridge, and was the cause of over 1,000 deaths, every precaution was taken against fires. For instance, all builders of houses were ordered to roof them with tiles, shingle boards, or lead, and to stop an outbreak any house could be pulled down. Thus, Mr. H. B. Wheatley on the safeguards: "For the speedy removal of burning houses each ward was to provide a strong iron hook with a wooden handle, two chains, and two strong cords, which were to be left with the bedel of the ward, who was also provided with a good horn 'loudly sounding.'" And, moreover, every householder was ordered to keep a barrel of water before his door.—London Chronicle.

"At home in England," said a visitor, "where the census shows that women are more than a million in the majority, a girl from the rank and file who receives and accepts a tolerable offer of marriage is thought by her relatives to have scored. I remember a story a friend told me of an old servant of hers in the country, who described the advantages of her daughter's recent marriage. The husband was a fairly prosperous man in the building trade; they had a comfortable house and garden, having no rent to pay, a maid to do her housework, a drive on Sundays when the horse was not needed for business purposes, and, above all, the certainty of provision for the future.

"It's unlucky," she concluded, "that Mary can't abide the man; but, as I says to her, ma'am, there would always be some drawback, whatever man you married.'"

AUTOMATIC LAMP ON STAIRS

Arrangement Gives Late-Comer Ample Time to Ascend Stairway Before Lights Are Extinguished.

In Europe many of the apartment houses are provided with automatic stair lamps which can be lighted by the touch of a button at the bottom or top of the stairs. The lamps burn for two or three minutes, automatically extinguishing themselves at the end of this period, says Electrical World. This arrangement gives the late-comer ample time to ascend the stairway (lighting each flight successively if there are several) and it has the advantage of saving the all-night use of lamps.

Such a scheme would, however, be less adaptable to American practise because most cities here have ordinances requiring landlords to operate hall lamps all night long. On the scale of other costs, also, electrical energy is cheaper in this country than abroad so that less need exists for economizing in current. Automatic switches used in Germany extinguish the lamps at the end of two or three minutes after the tenant has had time to reach his apartment if entering, or to pass through the street door if leaving the building. The controlling push buttons are conveniently placed at each door.

The lad had placed them in bottles as he got them and then sold them at bargain prices to park visitors. Police Commissioner Woods was informed, and detailed some extra men around the Harlem lake.

The "cops" captured nine of the young anglers. All had lines with bent pins attached to the end, with a piece of cotton for bait. The goldfish, in greater numbers this year than ever known before, rose to the cotton bait and were soon in captivity.—New York Tribune.

A Serious Accident

Bert Berthol had a very painful accident Wednesday afternoon which may prove fatal. He was working in a 64 foot well pit at the A. B. and A. L. Stone crusher with a partner. The empty bucket which was being lowered became detached and fell to the bottom. At the alarm from above Mr. Berthol started to step to the corner and was in a stooping position when the bucket struck him on the right shoulder. The shoulder was badly crushed and the shoulder blade broken. Two ribs were broken in his back which punctured the plural cavity. Dr. Merrill was called and hurried the patient to the hospital where everything possible was done to relieve his suffering. He may recover but will probably be permanently disabled.

ACTIVE GRANGES.

What Some of Them In Illinois Find to Do.

Co-operation With the School—A Housekeepers' Carnival—Discussion of State Laws Affecting Farmers. Community Service—Grange Newspaper.

The following interesting items have to do with some of the granges in Winnebago county, Ill., and are here printed as suggesting lines of work in which other granges may well engage:

In Maple Grove grange a married people's chorus was organized to furnish music for every meeting. A young lady member who recently took the short course in domestic science in the state university told the grange about it. "The Need and Benefit of Farm Accounting" was discussed by a competent accountant employed by a farming implement factory. Maple Grove has started a grange newspaper called the Breezy News, its contents being of local interest. At one meeting a short talk was given by a man who came with the necessary ballots to show the women how to vote. Afterward the county agricultural adviser gave an interesting talk on "Selection of Seeds and Preparation of Seed Bed."

Westfield grange changed the time of meeting from the day meetings that have been held all winter to the evening sessions and listened to a timely talk on "Soil Problems" by the county agricultural adviser and a talk on "Road Improvement" by the superintendent of highways.

Harmony grange is to hold all its meetings at the consolidated schoolhouse in its district. As there is a domestic science department, which they are free to use, it makes the work of entertainment very easy, a host and hostess being appointed who entertain as if in their own homes. It is doubtful if any grange in Illinois has established so close a relation to the school as has this grange. The result is being seen in the increased membership, which is largely teachers and scholars. At one meeting seventeen applications for membership were received, most of them being high school boys attending the consolidated school.

Riverside grange ladies gave a housekeepers' carnival at a recent meeting. One of them presided and introduced the several characters as they appeared. The first was Mrs. Epicure, who discussed "Three Meals a Day." Then Mrs. Orderly spoke about order and cleanliness. Mrs. Motherly talked about the care and bringing up of children. Mrs. Social dwelt on the social spirit in the rural community. The carnival ended with a tableau, "Work, For the Night Is Coming," by three ladies.

Burritt grange had quite a program of music and recitations not long ago, after which there was a talk on "Some of the Laws In This State Which Impose Hardship on Farmers." This was followed by the question box, of which this grange always makes a great feature.

Centerville grange recently had a meeting in the interests of the rural school, at which the program was in charge of three school directors, one from each district represented in the grange. The subject under discussion was "How Shall We Get More People to Attend the School Meetings?" The county judge also gave a talk on "Women and the Vote."

Guilford Hope grange had its roll call responses at a recent meeting in the shape of ideas for improving the general conditions of the neighborhood. This was followed by a talk on how these improvements could be brought to pass. The oldest member of the grange then spoke on "Recent Improvements In the County," which will be a help to farmers.

Oak Grove grange recently had "The Practical Care of Horses and Cattle" discussed by a veterinarian of long experience.

County Line grange has a current events feature in which everything of special interest the world over is touched upon. It is a great help in keeping busy farmers posted. This grange has an orchestra among its members.—H. M. W. in Ohio Farmer.

Grange Growth in Pennsylvania.

State Master William J. Creasy of Pennsylvania reports that the membership in the state is traveling rapidly toward 100,000 members. There has been a marked increase during the past few months. Pennsylvania is now probably next to New York, which has passed the 100,000 post. Ohio led last quarter (and has done so for several quarters) in the organization of new granges, which brings grange membership in the state close on the heels of Pennsylvania and Ohio—leaders of the grange army, the big triumvirate of organized farmers!

Worthy Master Creasy has been notified of his reappointment as chairman of the standing committee on insurance during the coming session of the national grange.

THE NON-PARTISAN county conference will hold a mass meeting at the San Jose auditorium rink this evening for the purpose of endorsing candidates for some of the county offices. Encouraged by the big success attained in the official house-cleaning of the county seat, a number of prominent men and women about the county devised a plan for a similar clean-up in the court house force. This clean-up is particularly aimed at the Oneal boss-ruled politicians. The general feeling in the county against this machine is most unfriendly and such a movement is just what has long been hoped for. The Boss has intimated that a new Green machine is being organized with the sole purpose of defeating him and his. There is an organized committee of co-workers with Mr. Green of Palo Alto as chairman, and a well working organization is necessary to cope with the case in hand. Maybe the Green machine might become corrupt, but once a change is made it is easier to make another if dissatisfied. We hope that this movement will not prove to be merely one to satisfy some of the disgruntled politicians

ONE of the first acts of the newly installed Mayor Husted of San Jose was the suspension of Commissioners Williams and Col. This looks as tho the entire city force will have to walk chalk as Husted will stand for no funny work. The specific charges are for voting to incur expenses of the fire department in excess of the funds set aside for a particular purpose, that of painting the firehouse.

FRUIT season is fly season. At this time when campers and workers are so numerous every precaution should be taken to keep the fly crop at the minimum. Garbage cans should be kept covered and all refuse put into them. Don't let the dirty tin cans accumulate about the premises as much for the health of the community as for the appearance. Have a fly trap and lastly keep the house and food clean by incessant swatting. Every one killed means hundreds before the season is over.

Back to the Farm

This is a popular slogan with many a professional and business man and there is hardly a man who at some time has not had dreams of getting back to the toil of his ancestors, tilling the soil. Everybody would like to own some of this old earth's surface and the longing "to get close to nature" is inborn. Here is one near-poet's verse on the subject at an especially inspired moment.

Who is this man with beetling brow,
Who understands the horse, the cow?
He'll tell you how to balance ration,
And make this land a mighty nation;
He'll tell you how to make it pay
With silage and alfalfa hay.
He knows the points of shepherd dogs
And all about the Duroc hogs.
He knows just how to lighten toil,
How to conserve the wasting soil.
He fills his niche and draws his pay
For other men he points the way.
Has theories concerning tillage,
He pours them forth in every village.
With sonorous word he makes alarm,
Back to the farm, back to the farm!

PROFESSOR

Who is this man, this prosperous man,
Who at conventions takes a stand,
Reforms the world by flag elation,
Knows all about the education
That we should have, from a to izzard?
Oh! he is sure a mighty wizzard.
If we will heed his well thot plan,
The loafer and the laboring man,
Will get into the beaten track,
Reverse their steps, and all go back
To rural home and greet the cow,
The gladsome pig, and learn to plow.
He'd even go and take a look,
And lessons, read them from a book.
He spent his boyhood in the field,
A mighty yearning makes him yield.
He'll fill his tank with gasoline
And steer his precious limousine
Back to the farm, back to the farm.

BANKER

Who is this man with sheaves of wheat,
And festooned ears of corn so neat,
With stalks of mammoth barley, rye,
All well arranged to catch the eye;
A desk equipped for every need
With many a form of mortgage deed,
A ready tongue, a pleasant smile,
And mastery of every wile?
Your fortune sure is in his hand,
If you will try the fertile land.
'Tis cent per cent or even more,
He'll let you in on the ground floor.
'Tis his delight to greet you, meet you,
Gladly take you out and treat you,
Get behind his prancing bay
Out upon the King's highway,
Back to the farm, back to the farm.

LAND AGENT

The rich man, poor man, beggar, thief,
Doctor, lawyer, merchant, chief,
All join the cry and point the way,
Tho they sacrifice themselves and stay
In naughty town, yet they would give,
The world, if they could only live
Away from the city's maddening throng,
And listen to the clear sweet song
Of warblers, chop and mow and pitch
The dirt from out the peaty ditch.
If they could feed the squealing sows
And milk nigh onto twenty cows,
They'd rise at sunup in July,
And cope with chinch bugs, weevil, fly,
They'd bend their backs to honest toil,
If only it was near the soil,
With mind at rest, no thot of harm,
Back on the farm, back on the farm.
